The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 17, 50, and 71 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Claim 17 does not depend from any claim in particular and is thus indefinite as to the scope. In claim 50, line 1, "the band" lacks a proper antecedent basis. In claim 71, line 2, "of", second occurrence, should be deleted.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-7, 9, 14-26, 28, 29, 34-45, 47-52, 56-69, and 71-73 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ruberti et al., US 2004/0092653 A1, which discloses a spinal intervertebral disk prosthesis (paragraph 0027; etc.) comprised of only a single solid biocompatible elastomer in the form of a cryogel or a "thetagel" (paragraph 0014; etc.) and defining an exposed surface that is modified to provide specific surface characteristics (paragraph 0030; etc.). Ruberti et al. teach that "[t]he nucleus pulposus is always in compression, while the annulus fibrosis is always in tension” (paragraph 0003) in the natural intervertebral disk, and that “the one-piece prosthetic intervertebral disk approximates the spatial distribution of the mechanical properties of the combination of the nucleus pulposus and the annulus fibrosis of the natural intervertebral disk” (paragraphs 0027; 0034; 0063; 0077; 0087; etc.). Because “[t]he loads that any vertebral implant must withstand will be reasonably high (on the order of 4MPa in compression)”, and the compressive load is transferred “to a tensile circumferential load in the annulus fibrosis” (paragraph 0077), an ultimate strength in tension greater than about 100 kPa would have been immediately obvious, if not inherent, to the ordinary practitioner. Likewise, since rotations of $\pm 5^\circ$ are achieved in a natural disk (paragraph 0007), the prosthesis having adequate viscoelastic properties (paragraph 0011; etc.) to permit 10° of overall rotation would likewise have been obvious, if not inherent. Regarding claim 4 and others: paragraphs 0067; 0075; etc. Regarding claim 15 and others, the use of fabric, mesh, or the like to anchor a disk implant to adjacent vertebrae via screws and bone ingrowth (into the fabric or mesh) was well known in the art at the time of the present invention and would have been obvious in order to stabilize the device relative to the spine.

The Applicant’s remarks have been considered but are deemed to be moot in view of the new grounds of rejection presented above.
